

ABSTRACT

A method for building a web-based application comprising displaying a top level menu of types, showing within each level appropriate schemas, recursively traversing the schema information to build cascading menus or toolbars, showing for each element all attributes, and building a fully qualified path or relative path based on XSL patterns when a programmer selects a level.